A black & white wedding
...a modern decor with a touch of romance

When I first meet with couples, my main objective is to take the time to really get to know them and to get a grasp of their style. We look through wedding magazines of course but also through decoration and design magazines. We talk about places they like to visit, their favorite restaurants, music, movies, etc...It allows me to get a sense of who they are and a feel for the atmosphere we need to create for their wedding.

Since it will be the first time they entertain their family and friends as a married couple, it is important to create a concept, a theme to reflect their personalities, and style. As soon as the guests receive their invitation they should be able to anticipate what kind of special day they will experience at their wedding.

When I met Louise and Claude, they told me: "We want a modern and clean look, similar to what we just did with our new home." She had already decided that her bridal party was going to wear black ...beautiful! Therefore, black was something she wanted to integrate into the theme. At the same time, she always dreamed of a white and very romantic wedding. So our objective was to put together a concept to reflect what they wanted; a mix of modern, black, white and romantic.

We started with the concept of the design and dressing of the tables. We had made, specifically for them, (or I should say for him because he had something very specific in mind!), a very chic three "layered" tablecloth. It was a mix of black silk and black velvet tablecloths on round tables to get the romantic feel combined with very modern white leather chairs to complement the look. We created very soft and all white flower arrangements for the center pieces. To brighten the very clean look of the tables, I thought of finding a black and white pattern that would be very romantic and would also be use on all the stationery.

We met with a graphic artist to create a unique pattern that would later be found on the name cards, the napkin rings, the menu placed in the folded black velvet napkins, the table assignments and of course on the invitations.

The modern black and white lounge and the softening of the atmosphere with foliage all around the room were the final touches to create a very special event that really represented the stars of the day.
